Land Use Alternatives

We used your maps to build a two future growth scenarios

Growth For All

Two Cities

Growth For All

- Growth dispersed equally
- Infrastructure improvements
  - Roundabouts
  - Industrial use train stop by wastewater pivot
  - Built out green infrastructure
    - Sustainable new developments: solar and grey water use, xeriscaping, and efficient appliances
- Invest in public facilities
  - Build out sewer/water as planned
  - Multiple pocket parks linked to trails
  - Invest in workforce and senior housing for aging in place
  - Protect wetlands in the southwest

Growth For All – New Housing

- More housing options
  - For families, singles, and seniors
  - Ability to age in place
  - Workforce housing reduces congestion
- Emphasis on strong neighborhoods
  - Single family home, townhomes, multiplexes, cottages, apartments, and condos
  - Concentrate infill on downtown and older residential neighborhoods
- Reduced residential water consumption
  - Smaller housing units typically use less water consumption overall

Growth For All – New Jobs

- Main street feel with smaller shops and offices on smaller commercial sites and in neighborhood nodes
- Intense build out of industrial in south served by rail

Two Cities

- Two-axis city with concentrated development in North and South
  - Large open space areas
  - Welcoming gates at either end of town
- Infrastructure improvements
  - Roundabouts and bypass for traffic flow
  - Green infrastructure with Solar and grey water use, xeriscaping, and efficient appliances
- Invest in public facilities
  - Build out sewer/water as planned
  - Event space
  - Workforce and senior housing for aging in place
  - Protect wetlands in SW

Two Cities – New Housing

- Many housing options
  - For families, singles, and seniors
  - Ability to age in place
  - Workforce housing reduces congestion
- Two centers
  - North: modern suburban town with multiple housing options single family home, townhomes, cottages, apartments
  - South: lively downtown center with mixed use housing, condos in multiplexes near the center, and small single-family lots on the edge

Two Cities – New Jobs

- Different employment base in each center
  - North: modern suburban town with small and large commercial sites and some office.
    - Large, regional serving commercial
  - South: lively downtown with a mix of small shops and restaurants attracting locals and tourists.
    - Expand existing industrial area for higher paying jobs
